CORIOLANUS cries out to be seen this season!

6th Century BC. An early Roman world. The elite, (the patricians), are an educated, wealthy, military ruling class that control peasants (the plebians) with an iron fist. Rome had come to its glory as a nation through the culture of war. Coriolanus, the Roman star of these victories, was trained from birth to be the hero of all wars. The flaw in him emerges when he addresses the people's hunger. Something he has never felt. The citizens know that the rich have corn, kept only for the wealthy. Coriolanus scorns the people's demand and degrades them publicly. They rebel with the guidance of a newly formed representative for the people. The Tribunes. The first peekings of democracy. The wealthy upper class cannot escape their narrow, violent prejudice. The result sends power and fame spiraling into chaos.
